The central-core building, with the Statistical Laboratory behind it to the right. The grass-covered roof allows direct communication at upper-floor level between the buildings round the central core, and it can be used for sun-bathing too.